COMPANY M MEMORIAL TABLET IS IMPRESSIVELY UNVEILED

Mayor Canfield, John D. Schoonmaker and Justice Hasbrouck Speak, All in Hope That Men's Sacrifices Have Helped Bring Lasting Peace—Bronze Designed by Former Co. M Man.

There was a large gathering of the people of Kingston and Ulster county at the unveiling of the Memorial Tablet to Company M, 10th Infantry, N. G., and to pay special tribute to the eight men of the company who made the supreme sacrifice at this ceremony should be held on the Sunday which has been especially designated as a day for prayer, the country over, for the righteous and successful deliberations of the armament conference which will convene in Washington, D. C., directly following Armistice Day. Apparently realizing that all these brave men who "went West," will have died in vain, unless some lasting, immeasurable good shall result from the unveiling of the tablet, the speaker for the afternoon, Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, in their name, demanded of the coming generation of armaments conference an ideal higher than any diplomacy, a principle beyond selfish interest of any nation, the fairest justice, if there shall be a righteous, lasting peace outcome. And in spite of the almost unmanageable difficulties which that conference will have to overcome, Judge Hasbrouck believed, that the desired dream of a just peace could be realized, but only through that power. It was a powerful appealing address.

At the opening of the exercises, Mayor Meacher presented Mayor Canfield as the chairman for the afternoon. Following the playing of a patriotic selection by the orchestra, the mayor called upon the Rev. P. C. Weyant, pastor of the Trinity M. E. Church, to offer the invocation, after which the entire audience rose and joined in singing two verses of America.

In his opening remarks, the chairman said that just such occasions as the one in which they were participating had occurred in the history of every great country when the people had gathered together to do honor to their warriors, in particular to those who had sacrificed their lives for their country. Company M, the mayor spoke of as having been the social and community center of the city and county. In 1891 and in 1917 and from then to the end of the war, with the result that the power and prestige of the country had been added to, and the American spirit intensified. Mayor Canfield said he had resurrected two proclamations which he had issued one in 1916, now already yellow with age, the other in 1917. As these two proclamations endeavored to express the sentiments of the entire community with regard to the men of Company M, the mayor read them both.

As one who had been the leader of the home line defense for our country, indefatigable in many if not all of the important war drives, the mayor then presented John D. Schoonmaker, who said:

Our recollections go back to the days when these boys marched away from Kingston, we of the older generations, with uncovered heads and sad hearts followed them as they answered their country's call, the younger generation with their young manhood thrilled and stirred beyond anything they had ever known, regretting only that they could not go with them.

When an inspiration and example of patriotism they furnished to us.

We saw them board the train, we followed them in thoughts to their camps, to their various duties, to their service overseas, and there were very few of any of these men of Company M who did not go "over there," as they were called, and they were proud of their safe return to us, and our thoughts were ever of them, and how proud we were of them because what we heard of them, told us that they were clean and that they had not faltered in their duty.

Ulster county is proud of these men and can never forget them nor can we repay them for their great service.

This tablet was designed by a Kingston man, Charles J. Port, a former member of Company M, and is both beautiful and enduring, but the glory of these men in whose honor and memory it is erected, will go on beyond the time of any memorial that can be placed here.

Sergeant Fitzgerald and Charles J. Port, the designer of this and the Spanish War tablet, to unveil the tablet, which is on the left wall of the entrance to the armory as one enters, and which was covered with an American flag. The audience rose and faced the tablet during its unveiling, and while the orchestra played appropriate music. The bronze tablet which bears the names of the officers and members of Company M who were in the world war, with a special inset of the names of those who gave their lives for their country, is indeed beautiful in its simple elegance and fine symbolism.

The chairman then called upon Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck, another of our citizens who identified himself with our Home Defense organization, our war drives and who was chairman of the Red Cross Chapter, who gave the following address:

We are here today to assist in unveiling a memorial tablet to the living and "that other living called the dead," the men of Company M who during the holocaust of war in camp and march and on fields of battle far from their native heath displayed such courage and virtue as to win from our hearts where they were already enshrined the unstinted praise that follows heroic service to one's country.

These men were volunteers. They became such when as state militia they were federalized under the statute by taking the oath of soldiers in the national service. This great act of devotion in the country's hour of trial must plead with their fellow citizens like angels trumpet tongued for the recognition which their incalculable service demands. This act of volunteering shows how true these men rang to the great underlying sentiment of country.

It was a time of trial. The future of the world was in the balance. For nearly three years the Central powers had waged an unequal and unprovoked war against France and England and Russia and had set at naught all the cherished principles of the best civilization. The seas for commerce to all nations. They had murdered, pillaged and destroyed the properties of inoffensive citizens to make war more terrible and bring a swifter victory. They had murdered citizens of the United States sailing the seas within the protection of international law. They had sunk ships engaged in legitimate commerce. Sneaking in their submarines they gloried in the destruction of ships and the murder of passengers and sailors. They struck medals to commemorate the outrage of the Lusitania. The sky line of civilization was lurid with atrocities. It was not alone what had been done. It was the promise of the future that cast a cloud of apprehension over this fair land. Every man knew that if France was overwhelmed and England laid low, that America was marked for destruction; that we in our peace loving security dwelt in a house of cards; that if we were jealous of our freedom we sooner or later would have to fight for it.

Are you free? Freedom was at stake. Just as surely as it was in Belgium from whence girls and boys, men and women were enslaved to do the work of supporting the German armies against their allies. The ultimate triumph of the Hun with German Kultur as the axis would not have constituted a "benevolent despotism" like that of Antonius or Marcus Aurelius. It would not have continued America as the land of equality, freedom and opportunity. The criterion of Belgium negatives all that. Wherever the will to victory perched triumphant on the lance of the Chians the wills in defeat were relegated to subordination. The relation was that of master and man; unbridled power and inarticulate submission; Godlessness and rape; arrogance and slavery. The underlying purpose of the arch despot was to achieve a power mightier than any worldly power to shake the glory from the shades of Alexander and Caesar and make the last track of Napoleon's ambitions look like a puppet show—in a word to make himself the master of a planet.

All honor to these men who early realized their duty to their country and hastened voluntarily to her colors. But strong as all these reasons were, think you that they would have buckled those young men to leave their home shores and embark on the pathless sea to set up our standards in face of an invincible enemy upon a foreign soil. Think you they would have left to return to France alone—Lorraine or a strip of land west of Alsace. No! That sacrifice of American men over three thousand miles of sea in bottomless pits to the rapacious submarines could have been made for any world thing.

It was the call of the ideal. That ideal which is found first in the Christian faith—again in those noble souls along the walls of human progress, the "Magna Carta," the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, the United States Constitution of the United States.

It was for this ideal they fought. It was to his ideal in training camp.

BERGDOLL'S NAME OFF SLACKER LIST

TOMASIAN CRUEL ALLEGES WIFE

Who Sues for Separation—"Religious Squabble," Says Husband's Attorney—Tomasian Was in Business, Here.

Characterized by Attorney McCabe of Poughkeepsie, attorney for defendant, as a "religious squabble," Mrs. Sharmar D. Tomasian, a former resident of Poughkeepsie, began an action for separation on the grounds of cruelty before Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck in special term of supreme court Saturday afternoon. The Tomasians were former residents of Kingston, where Mr. Tomasian was one of the proprietors of the Tomasian & Van Valkenburgh Shirt Manufacturing Company, which had a plant on Thomas street. The venture in business failed when the war started and Mr. Tomasian was called into the army. Since he returned he has opened a factory in Poughkeepsie, which he now conducts.

Mayor Canfield appears for the plaintiff and Mr. McCabe appears for defendant.

Numerous witnesses were sworn Saturday and testified on behalf of plaintiff. Mrs. Tomasian before her marriage resided with her parents on Elmendorf street.

The action is brought on the grounds of cruelty, plaintiff claiming that Mr. Tomasian while they resided in Poughkeepsie threatened to injure her and at one time to kill her. A sister of Mrs. Tomasian testified to actions which she witnessed while visiting her sister's home in Poughkeepsie.

From testimony it appears that Mr. and Mrs. Van Valkenburgh attended the Free Methodist Church in Kingston, that Tomasian attended the Methodist Episcopal Church and that his wife while in Poughkeepsie was an attendant at the Salvation Army Chapel, and that Tomasian objected to her going there. Mr. McCabe, attorney for defendant, on cross-examination of plaintiff's mother, brought out the fact that when she learned that there was a Nazarene Church in Poughkeepsie she advised her daughter and husband to go there.

The action was characterized by Mr. McCabe as "a religious squabble," but Mrs. Van Valkenburgh, mother of plaintiff, and Mayor Canfield, attorney for plaintiff, denied that it was. Mr. McCabe stated that it was a matter between husband and wife which they could settle, but this was also denied.

Some time ago Mrs. Tomasian alleges she was compelled to leave her husband and come home to live on account of his cruel actions toward her.

Tomasian is an Armenian.

After considerable testimony had been taken the matter was adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, when further testimony will be taken.

MAYOR CANFIELD IN STATEMENT PLEDGES LOYALTY TO PARTY

Tells Those Who Would Write His Name on Ballot Not To Waste Votes But Cast Them For Man Who Can Do Most For "Our City."

VOTERS OF KINGSTON:

A serious misunderstanding has apparently arisen in the minds of the voters of the City. I am informed that some of the voters believe I am running independently. I understand that a number intend to write my name upon the ballot.

I am not running independently. I am not a candidate. I do not seek votes. I do not want any votes. A vote cast for me would be lost. The question is entirely one of the city, "our city." Bias, prejudice, or personal feelings should not warp the judgment of the voter or decide how she or he shall vote. The voters should consider Kingston and vote for the candidates who can do most for Kingston and render the best service to and for Kingston.

Having submitted my candidacy to the enrolled Republicans on Primary Day, I have accepted and abide by the decision. So should my friends and supporters. I am as a Republican and shall continue to be a Republican.

Respectfully,
PALMER CANFIELD, JR.

Practically the entire sittings were consumed in the examination and cross-examination of John L. Harper, universally regarded as the most distinguished hydro-electric engineer in this country, who is the general manager, chief engineer and vice-president of the great Niagara Hydro Power Company. Mr. Harper valued Judge Grant's plant at a sum which would produce an annual net return of substantially $48,000, leaving the rate of capitalization to the commission. Judge Clearwater and Harry H. Flemming represented the Tri-County Light and Power Company, and William Grosz, assistant corporation counsel, appeared for the city.

No trace was found of any of the bandits. A number of women among the cafe patrons gave up their money and jewelry to the bandits, who escaped in a taxi cab. The chauffeur later told the police he had driven the bandits to the cafe after they had threatened to shoot him.

FIRE DESTROYED MURPHY BARGES

Fifteen covered barges owned by Daniel J. Murphy of Spring street were totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin early Sunday morning at Rhinecliff. As Mr. Murphy has been out of town for several days and had not returned as yet it was impossible to ascertain the amount at which he placed his loss, or whether there was any insurance carried by him on the barges.

The fleet of barges were berthed at the Central New England Railroad dock, a short distance north of the Rhinecliff ferry slip. The fire was discovered about 4 o'clock Sunday morning by a tinsmith on the New York Central, who sent in an alarm which brought many residents from that section to the scene. It was impossible to do anything to extinguish the blaze, as several barges were on fire when it was discovered. The watchman on the barges had made a tour of the boats at 2 o'clock and found everything apparently all right.

The barges had been at the Murphy boatyard in the Rondout creek for some time, where considerable work had been done on them, and the barges had then been towed to the other side of the river. Someone turned in an alarm of fire from Box 15, Delaware avenue and North street, to which the fire department responded, but were unable to be of assistance.

ULSTER IS IRRECONCILABLE

Craig Unwilling To Let Dublin Parliament Govern Unionists Or To Barter Away Disputed Counties.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. London, Nov. 7.—The new crisis in the Irish peace situation, precipitated by the refusal of the Ulster Unionists to accept the proposed compromise measures, appeared today to be working swiftly towards a climax. A member of the entourage of Sir James Craig, premier of the Unionist government of Ulster, told the International News Service that Ulster would not make the concessions demanded by the Sinn Fein.

"Sir James is not prepared to agree to an all Irish parliament at parliament at Dublin which would have absolute control of Ulster," said this informant. "Furthermore, he is unwilling to enter into bartering over the counties of Fermanagh and Tyrone."

The Sinn Fein claimed these counties on the ground that the preponderance of voters were Sinn Fein sympathizers.

Michael Collins, commander in chief of the Irish Republican army and members of the Sinn Fein peace delegation, was scheduled to arrive from Dublin this afternoon, although it was stated at Sinn Fein headquarters that no further sessions of the peace conference were expected before Wednesday.

JURIST PRESIDED

And Speeded Up Said St. Nicholas Society Debaters.

Judge Clearwater, the first vice-president of the St. Nicholas Society, presided at the eighty-sixth annual stated meeting of that old Knickerbocker organization at the University Club in New York on Friday evening. It is said by members of the society that the Judge introduced those methods of expeditious for which he was noted as the chairman of important committees of the "law" constitutional convention—that is, when he thought the debate had been long enough he accelerated the proceedings, thus speeding up the debate and putting the matter to rest.

SUITS AND COATS

Lines Noted in the New Garments for Fall.

Accentuate the Flaring
Outline: Cape Effects in Evening in Sleeves.

Among the suits and coats which have been added to the original early collection of one New York house several which make a point of the accent, observes a fashion correspondent. These effects are not shown in a flagrant manner, but in a more easy fashion that characterizes the productions of this house.
The soft fabrics of the pile family are chosen in the makeup of a great many of the garments, with the finest velvet employed in the inner of the more dressy type of garment.

Knickerbockers are utilized to advantage in several of the coats and suits, and in many instances follow the outline of a sleeve or of an opening cut side, back or front.
In the instance of the flare
the lines of stitching are applied in such a manner as to accentuate the effect.

Many of the models are derivatives of imports. One coat is considered for the original handling which has been given the sleeves
the side falling from the shoulder to the waistline almost entirely concealing the sleeves. Sable fitch in the chosen to fashion the collar for the coat.

One of the most striking numbers is a Jenny coat for evening wear designed in American Beauty style in velvet, the fronts treated with wide bands of mole and gold brocade the color scheme being most effective. A wide fold of the material set on a low line at the back attached to the sleeves, an individual silhouette resulting.

The same material in the same style fashions a delectable suit, the upper section of the jacket adopting a deuter contour, accentuated by the application of self cords. Simplicity gray fox in generous manner furnishes the collar and cuffs.

THOUGHT FOR EARLY AUTUMN

This costume for early fall suggests dirt slightly longer than the current mode. Boutache braiding and gold fringe combine smartly for a simply cut navy serge.

Belts and Bashes.

A new slogan might be, "It is the belt that makes the gown," for in many instances all else is plain, and the styling around the waist becomes the center of the design of the whole look. All sorts of fancy ribbons and beverages are brought into play for the form of decoration. Then there are wide galloons, and strings of beads and metal to be used for girdles. Any one of them is a thing of beauty all its own, and its association with the garment brings both into relief with a definition one cannot fail to appreciate.

For the Top Coat.

An advertisement has been found for the coming fall coat, and, though the description will continue to be of the nature of the fall wardrobe. A few new shades are being developed and heavier, sportier and more casual and other lines will be used for the winter and spring. A new coat will be made to suit the season, and some high shades.

A Distinctive Dress.

White, gray, blue and white are the dominating colors in the new fall wardrobe. The dress is developed in the same style
as the winter dress, the only difference being a panel at the bottom of the skirt. The new dress is offered in the same style
as the winter dress, the only difference being the color of the skirt.

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 7, 1921.

THE CAMPAIGN CLOSERS.

Tomorrow the voters of Kingston will go to the polls and elect the men who will have charge of city affairs for the next two years. Last minute attempts to sway the election will have no effect. The Republican party has conducted a clean, straightforward campaign based on the policies outlined by Walter P. Crane, the Republican candidate for mayor. The facts have been presented to the voters of the city fairly, candidly, and honestly by both Mr. Crane and the others associated with him on the Republican ticket. The Republican candidates have avoided political mud slinging. The campaign has been squarely presented on the respective merits of the candidates.

Those who have watched Kingston's progress under Republican administration are anxious to have no obstacle placed in the way of the city's future growth. They are the men and the women who will vote for the election of the Republican ticket. They know that Mr. Crane is fitted by training and experience to fill the office of mayor. They also believe that he should have the assistance of a Republican common council to assist him in promoting his policies.

The Republican party has no last minute appeal to make. All that is desired is to have the voters carefully weigh the respective merits of those aspiring to the various offices and then vote for the men they believe to be the best qualified to fill the offices. If Kingston voters desire a clean straightforward business administration, retrenchment in public expenditures and an administration which will give satisfaction to every resident of the city, irrespective of party affiliation, they should place the cross mark in the square to the left of the name of every candidate on the Republican ticket.

IMPRATICABLE.

The World Digest of Reform News, which is described as an organ of the Methodist Board of Temperance, is quoted as saying that "the only good bootlegger is a dead bootlegger," that peddlers of intoxicants, instead of being sent to jail, "should be lodged five feet underground," and that, while it "would be the last to advocate the unwarranted use of weapons by officers, a bootlegger is worth a lot more to the country dead than alive." If these quotations are reliable, it is pertinent to ask: If this is not a recommendation that lynching be seriously considered as a policy of prohibition enforcement, what is it?

Whatever may be said of such a suggestion on its moral side, it is likely to be widely voted impracticable. For, though the bootleggers may be only tens of thousands, those who buy of them are millions, and every one who buys of them is a participant in crime, equal in law-breaking and equally guilty. Justice, therefore, would require that the buyers as well as the sellers "be lodged five feet underground" and this, to say the least, would involve more grave-digging than even the great army of the unemployed would be capable of, granting that they could be enlisted in the cheerful service. There is the further objection, that the moral atmosphere would not be thoroughly cleared even by the elimination of both buyers and sellers, for there would still remain great numbers of persons who venture to question the wisdom of the 18th amendment. However drastic the measures employed to that end, a country composed only of orthodox prohibitionists hardly seems possible at present.

A COSTLY HERITAGE.

As they listened to Commander John G. Conroy's speech, the five times foreign guests of the celebration of the American Legion at Kingston this week have reflected that not the least of the costly heritage of war is the political issue for decades of the demand of the majority of the fighters for compensation. They know little about the predictions made that have been paid for half a century and are still paid in promises to Union veterans of the Civil War, but they were made aware of the American Legion's belief that it has great political power. They heard Commander Emery declare that the Senate, in sending the McCumber bonus bill back to the committee "bowed to the will of the Executive, not to fact and reason," which sounds like a charge of usurpation against the President of the United States, and further: "I can not conceive of a Congress so derelict in its duty, so unmindful of its just obligation to those who served their country at great financial loss, or so blind to the wishes of our people as to be misled again into refusing to adjust the economic balance between the man who went to war and the man who did not."

A political party that for half a century showed such deference to the Civil War soldier vote could have no wish to offend such a powerful body as the American Legion. Only a belief that the government was threatened with bankruptcy could have induced President Harding to intervene and ask a postponement—only a postponement—of the bonus bill. The complaining members of the American Legion may rest assured that they will not have to wait long. If the future is to be judged by the past, for fifty years to come the two contending political parties of this country will be with each other in doing their utmost to please so powerful an organized body of voters.

Burroughs Nature Club Notes

Copyright 1921. BY HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Dept. of this paper. Look for answers in this column. Can You Answer These Questions?

1. Is the humming bird moth very rare?

2. Is the cat cruel in its way of playing with a victim, or is the creature just whetting her appetite?

3. What do baby pheasants feed on when hatched? Does the mother pheasant feed them as the hen feeds her chicks?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers To Previous Questions:

1. Please advise what to feed a young swallow.

The old bird feeds her young macerated insects, gathered by the swallow's zig-zag flight through the air. Gather all the flies, mosquitoes and tiny soft insects you can find. Try grasshoppers also, but mash up the bodies into smaller bits. The young birds need constant feeding, a mouthful every few minutes.

2. How fast do bugs multiply?

They lay from 6 to 50 eggs per batch, and the eggs require from a week to 10 days to hatch, varying with temperature. The bug passes through a series of moults, feeding (it is thought) once during each moult, and is mature at 11 weeks. The notion that they "multiply overnight" is rather exaggerated, but if a number of bugs were laying, on successive days, new colonies might seem to arrive "overnight."

3. Is rice water all right for gold fishes?

Some aquarists use it, but others claim it makes the water cloudy and keeps the fishes unhealthy. The diet recommended by the New York Aquarium is tiny bits of chopped raw beef, lamb, fish or shell fish; ground raw cereal and a little cooked cereal; ground toasted bread; grated, baked or boiled potato; some prepared fish food but no rice water. Feed six days regularly, letting the fishes fast one day a week. Vary the bill of fare.

PHELPS LECTURE AT FIRST DUTCH

"Pilgrimage, a journey, especially to some sacred place." It was that, a journey to some of the sacred places of England, that Dr. William Lynn Phelps, Lamson Professor of English Literature, took his large audience with him on Saturday evening when he spoke in the chapel of the First Reformed Dutch Church. In behalf of the Monday and Athar-baction Clubs, who brought Dr. Phelps to Kingston, Mrs. Van Hovenberg, president of the Monday Club, presented Dr. Phelps for a second time to a Kingston audience.

Doubtless a good part of the audience had to admit that Dr. Phelps's statement that the great majority of cultured people had little accurate knowledge of elementary English geography was true, but considerable of this lack of information regarding a country just about the size of our states of either Michigan or Connecticut, was made up to the audience most graciously by the speaker.

Dr. Phelps considered the best way to undertake a pilgrimage through England to be by bicycle, but warned his hearers that his travels of which he was to talk would surely seem tame indeed, to those who first visited before inaccessible places, etc. He admitted that he was in no sense a frontiersman, but was greatly in sympathy with Chesterton when he said, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, but not my carcass," meaning that he gathered inspiration from the sight of natural grandeur rather than from the physical exertion of traversing difficult places.

So Dr. Phelps took his companions of the evening with him not on a geography demonstration, but to visit places made famous by great men of by the ghosts of those who had never lived at all except in the pages of the books written by such men. Furthermore, the speaker showed both the climate and the scenery of England to offer almost telescopic background to any and all pictures which the pen artist might choose to depict, since every climate but the tropical is to be found in England and mountains, meadows, plains and seas are England's.

To try and reproduce in a newspaper report the delight of the pilgrimage taken with Dr. Phelps Saturday evening, would be like giving a lover of music a printed score to look at when he was longing to hear the music. While to Americans everything in England seems small it all possesses the charm of a garden, and what we know of its past in a literary way, we will find, in many places unchanged today. He took his companions to Saturday evening with him through 300-year-old Devonshire and further north to North Devon, the land of Lorna Doone. Visiting in addition to the other scenes of this exceedingly beautiful story, the church in which Lorna Doone and John Ridd were married. Dr. Phelps admitted that he had always wondered how in the world the villain could have managed to shoot the bride without hitting either the groom, the bridesmaid or the clergy. When he saw that over was, his only wonder was that the entire assembly was not shot up.

The place inspiring Kingsley's "Westward, Ho!" the "Island of Penzance," "Lad's End," the first or the last place in England visited, were made familiar.

The fact that England has not, since 1066, when visited by William the Conqueror, had national guests come to stay without invitation, because of its protecting coast lines and surrounding rough waters, was counted practically a national miracle, after all.

On the journey down the river Wye, taken in an open boat rowed by two husky men, the traveler passed Goodrich Castle, where the little girl was the inspiration of Wordsworth's "We Are Seven."

Monmouth was visited; Wales just invaded out of respect to Eli Yale; Ireland somewhat traversed and remembered with a curious bit of romantic history; the land of Wordsworth, Ruskin and Arnold exquisitely enjoyed, making for a far keener appreciation of those writers, especially Wordsworth.

A little trip into Scotland which included Glasgow and Edinburgh, covered the land of Burns, Carlyle and Scott.

Then Dr. Phelps told of his quest for, to him, the ever elusive nightingale, that was entertaining, exceedingly humorous and finally thrilling as he actually heard a trio of these mysterious night songsters under most unusual circumstances. It was also his good fortune to hear the next day, the almost equally famous skylark and the English cuckoo. It was his opinion that the reason that the nightingale could not be persuaded to sing in America, was no scientific reason at all, but simply because the poor bird could not stand our American poets and did of homecoming for its home port of England.

Throughout the lecture to the most delightful, intimate, often humorous conversation with his audience, Dr. Phelps related to the mind's eye of those who had themselves been there, but who gained by his interpretation, often quoted from the authors to whom the pilgrimage was made, created the very scenes and persons for those not so fortunate as to have visited England, and left his audience with a debt for more pleasant thoughts and scenes made there for many days and nights to come.

AMENDMENT No. 1

Why You Should Vote YES on Amendment No. 1

It does not discriminate against women!

It will not lower civil service standards.

Eighteen other states have enacted similar laws.

U. S. Government gives veterans preference.

Preference is now given to Civil War veterans.

The state asked private employers to prefer the veteran when he first returned home.

Washington, McKinley, Lincoln, and Roosevelt advocated it.

It will not impair or interfere with our educational system.

It will still fulfill the old time saying, "The Best Shall Serve the State."

Washington's Inaugural Address in 1783:

"Where is the man or body of men who wishes to remain indebted for the defense of his own person or property to the exertions and bravery and blood of others, without making one generous effort to repay this debt of honor and gratitude? In what part of the continent shall we find the man or body of men who would not blush to stand up and propose measures purposely calculated to rob the soldier of his reward?"

The law now reads that veterans of the Civil War shall be given preference. Therefore, this amendment only extends the favor and preference to our other War Veterans.

You were with us in spirit "Over there." Now Kingston Post No. 150, American Legion wants you to be with them on Election Day and vote "YES" on Amendment No. 1.

CHURCH OBSERVES 6TH ANNIVERSARY

The Ponchockle Union Church, Congregational, celebrated its sixth anniversary Sunday. The pastor, the Rev. F. W. Moot, delivered the anniversary sermon, choosing as a theme "The Test of a Church," text Matt. 7:20, "By their fruits ye shall know them." He said in part:

Tonight we celebrate the sixth anniversary of the organization of this church. Six years, in a sense, is a very short time, and yet it is sufficient to test the necessity and worthiness of such an institution as we represent.

An evidence of the necessity of a church organization in this community is seen in the fact that there is no other Protestant Church within a radius of one mile, while in another portion of the city there are five Protestant Churches on one short street. There were many families in this community which were without ministry of any church, and scores of men and women, who had lived here for many years, were not connected with any church. Many of these have identified themselves with this church, and some have passed on to their heavenly reward, having found their Saviour within the past six years.

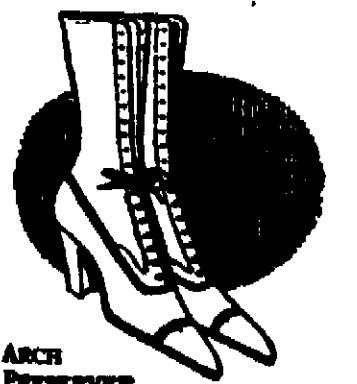

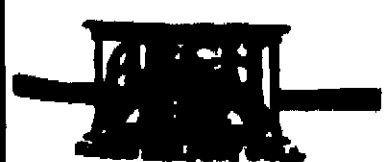

A clearer test, however, may be seen by a detailed application of the text. During these years the regular services of worship have been maintained and relatively large audiences have been in attendance. The Bible school has ministered to about 140 children and young people, many of whom have been received into the membership of the church. A large Y. P. S. C. E. has afforded an avenue for the development and activities of the young people, while other organizations have given opportunities to the older members for church work and Christian activities. During these years 260 persons have been received into the membership of the church, 133 by letter and 122 on confession of faith. The losses have been 21 by death and 22 by letter, leaving a present membership of 217, of which 198 reside in this city, while 19 have moved to other parts of the country.

The financial report is very favorable. The Bible school has raised $288.12; the Y. P. S. C. E. about $150; the W. H. and F. M. Society, $68; the Ladies' Aid, $2,532; while about $15,000 has passed through the general treasury of the church. We now own a beautiful church and parsonage valued at $25,000, and have no debt. There is a balance in every treasury, the Ladies' Aid Society having over $1,200 on hand.

Present conditions are very satisfactory. The church is about to purchase new pews for the auditorium. The auxiliary societies are rendering efficient service and affording an actual need of the community. The future outlook is very hopeful. While the church, because of its limitations of the community, can never become a large body, yet it can always bear fruit that will justify its existence.

A PRESBYTERIAN VESPER SERVICE

The first vesper service held in the Rondout Presbyterian Church since it was built was held Sunday afternoon, and others will be held until further notice. The service opened at 5 o'clock that afternoon and closed promptly at 8 o'clock. The vesper service attracted a large congregation, and the services were of inspiring nature. Frank Finley and Miss Virginia Lockamp of the church choir sang two beautiful solos and the church choir rendered an anthem. The vesper sermon by the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis was "The Wonderful Fire," and was an inspiring message of God's power and influence.

At the morning service Father and Son week was observed with a special sermon by Dr. Ellis on the theme "My Beloved Son." There was also special music by the choir. Wednesday evening in the chapel will be held an old time social under the auspices of the Sunday school, and the congregation is invited to attend. There will be a special program and refreshments. Fathers and their sons should make it a point to attend, and also mothers and their daughters. This social will be held in connection with the countrywide observance of Father and Son Week. Thursday evening's topic will also be of extreme interest to parents and it is expected that there will be a large attendance at the prayer service that evening.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, Nov. 7.—Thursday, November 5, was the birthday of Florence and Gladys Mott, the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie E. Mott, and on the afternoon of that day they had a party at their home at which sixteen of their little friends were guests. Several grown-ups were also present. The children enjoyed various games, which gave them a good appetite for the delicious refreshments that were served later. Pink and green were the colors used to make the dining table attractive. Streamers draped from the electric lamps to the four corners of the table and other fanciful arrangements completed the decorations. Birthday cakes with the appropriate number of lighted candles were placed at the ends and center of table. The favors were pretty little baskets of candies. The guests were as follows: Velma Harmon, Helen Lund, Mildred Lund, Mary Wheeler, Elsie Goswami, Marie Scheide, Martina Scheide, Eleanor Freer, Catherine Hummel, Caroline Hummel, Norma Mott, Marie O'Reilly, Husbrough Freer, Jr., Alma Lund, R. E. Mott, Jr., Leonard Mott, Mrs. Husbrough Freer, Miss Maudie Freer and Mrs. L. C. Goodrich. After spending a jolly afternoon all said good-bye with many wishes for a happy return of the day.

Arthur Salomon of Brooklyn, the little grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ryett, is now convalescing. His physicians think that he will be able to get out of bed in a week or two. He has been afflicted with paralysis of the throat for a number of weeks and a weakness of the heart has developed. This makes his recovery rather a slow process.

A Three-Ply Unfairness

is threatened by Constitutional Amendment No. 1 which gives absolute preference in our civil service to war veterans, regardless of what they did, over all other citizens.

Amendment Number 1 is Unfair to:

The Veteran:

1. No recognition of quality of service. The school-boy member of the Student Army Training Corps gets the same preference as the hero of Belleau Woods.
2. No recognition of sacrifice. The soldier incapacitated by wounds could not fill most civil service places; the man who never left Camp Upton gets the preference and the job.
3. Widows and orphans of the men who died for democracy are shut out of the public service by this undemocratic preference. Women, whatever their war service, cannot class as veterans under this amendment.
4. This amendment makes the veteran a seeker of advantage not based on proved merit.

The Public:

1. Compels the appointment of ill-qualified public employees instead of the best-equipped, as under the present system. A veteran with only 70% rating must be taken.
2. Such appointments can only reduce the efficiency of the public service. A 70% veteran cannot handle the job as well as the 99% non-veteran.
3. Lowered efficiency in the civil service means greater cost and higher taxes. It means more crime, more fire losses and increased insurance rates.
4. Amendment Number One virtually shuts the public service to the non-veteran public for a generation.

The Civil Service:

1. Compels appointment and promotion of men who could get neither in open competition.
2. Destroys chance of promotion of those who have deserved it by long and able service, if they are not veterans.
3. Practically excludes women, although women are needed in many places—especially in the public schools.
4. Makes public office practically a military monopoly; opens it to men too old for efficient service, since courts have ruled veterans cannot be barred from civil service examinations because of age.

Do you want a square deal? Then give others one!

YES	"Shall the proposed amendment to section nine of article five of the Constitution, extending a preference in employment and promotion in the civil service to veterans of the Spanish and World wars" be approved?"
NO X

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN F. O'RYAN

Commander of the 27th Division Overseas says:

"I do not favor a general preference conceived by political expediency which provides for all veterans irrespective of the merits of their service, and in derogation of the rights of other men who were too young at the time to enter the war. The latter would be contrary to our American spirit of fair play."

ELECT CASHMAN

The members of the Colonial Lodge, No. 1032, Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America, desire to call the attention of the voters of the Third Ward to the candidacy of Michael A. Cashman, on the Democratic ticket for the office of Alderman and to urge his support and election.

Mr. Cashman has been president of our organization for three years. In this office he has shown himself to be a wise executive and an able administrator. His manner of caring for finances has especially made it clear that he is qualified to serve in the Common Council.

He represented our lodge and our members at the International Convention at Toronto this year, and in that convention held his own well and intelligently represented those who sent him.

We feel that Mr. Cashman in the Common Council will prove an able and progressive Alderman and that his work will please the people of his ward.

Therefore do we publish this tribute and urge that generous and general support be accorded him by the voters of his ward.

Signed,

WHEN you take your first ride in a Franklin, watch both the road and the speedometer. Otherwise you may not realize either the roughness of the road or the speed of the car—there is so little vibration.

The Franklin doesn't "fight" the road. Its light weight and flexible construction endow it with resilience, "give," life. That means distance as well as comfort in a day's run; slow depreciation as well as long tire life during your ownership.

Other reasons why you will like the Franklin are the small amount of routine care it requires, its ease of handling, and its unequaled economy:
